A 23-year-old man was gunned down last night outside a South Philadelphia gentleman's club, police said.

Around 4:35 a.m., the man, who has not yet been identified, was shot in the jaw and back in the parking lot of Club Onyx, at 2908 S. Columbus Blvd.

The man was rushed to Temple University Hospital where he was later pronounced dead. Police have made no arrests in the case and the investigation is still ongoing.

This is the second major shooting at the club in a little more than a year. A 26-year-old man was shot in the chest on the club's front porch in February 2012. METRO

State reps: Gov. liquor plan 'hypocritical'

State representatives Ed Neilson and Paul Costa are calling Gov. Tom Corbett's liquor plan hypocritical to small businesses and educators.

The reps said the governor has claimed to be a "champion" of the state's small, family-owned businesses, but that his plan actually threatens those businesses.

"Under the Corbett plan, a license to expand into wine and spirit sales would cost beer distributors $150,000, while giant retail competitors with enormous profit margins would only pay $25,000 to $35,000 — small change for Wal-Mart or Target," the two say in an open letter. METRO

Montco stab suspect still on the run

A family member is wanted in connection with the attempted murder of a 33-year-old Montgomery County woman, according to reports.

An arrest warrant has been issued for Thomas Troy Young, 49, who is suspected of stabbing the woman early Sunday morning in Hatfield, reports say. METRO

Teens turned in for robbing girl, 9

Boys' parents brought them to police after seeing video Both to be charged with robbery

The parents of two boys seen on video snatching a 9-year-old girl's wallet, which contained $13, outside an East Germantown convenience store turned their children in to police.

On Friday morning, the two boys, 13 and 14, watched the third-grader make a purchase inside Jaques Mini-Market, which is located at Wakefield and Ashmead streets. The juveniles then went outside and waited for the girl to leave the store. Once outside, the boys stopped the girl on the 5200 block of Wakefield Street and grabbed her wallet, which contained $13. The boys then fled east on Ashmead Street.

▶ One of the boys who was turned in

Police promptly posted the store's video surveillance, which caught the boys in action, on YouTube. The video, seen above, was watched more than 1,000 times by the end of the weekend.

About three hours after the incident, the first boy was dragged to the 14th Police District by his mother. About an hour later the second boy's parents called the station. Both saw the surveillance footage and recognized their sons. Both males will be charged with robbery. METRO

JOHN BOLARIS

BOLARIS VISION

WEATHERING THE STORM OF MY LOVES

If you know me at all, you know my No. 1 love in life is my daughter. And I would do anything in the world to take care of her and stay near my girl. I'm a single dad who has a good relationship with my ex and we both strive to do what is best for her. With that being said, I have three other loves going on — my fiancee, the weather and my newfound love: the stock market.

Since departing FOX29 more than a year ago, I have been desperately trying to land a weather gig here in Philly. Well, needless to say, I've failed. And realizing this has set my inner fears raging through my head: leaving the city I love and my daughter, as well as not being able to take care of everything financially — that is one deep, dark abyss.

Desperate action was required. I sold my home, moved out of the city to reduce rent and needed to find some way to make income. My world was crashing down. Anyone reading this who has or is going through this knows what I'm talking about.

Quoted

I'm calling it the only way I can: "The Relationship Storm Watch."

So one January afternoon, I stroll into Barnes and Noble (my daughter and I go every weekend that I have her) and a book catches my eye — "Tap Dancing to Work" by Warren Buffet.

Next thing I knew I'm day trading stocks. It's intense and risky, especially when you're trading your life savings. I discovered it doesn't fall far from forecasting the weather: You read charts, trends and financial models while performing intense research into past history, future projections, etc. But between stock and weather analysis, stocks pay the bills 24/7.

However, my fiancee, whom I truly love, finds herself locked out. I'm in front of my computer from 7 a.m. until past midnight at times, with just a break to work out at noon. She has terribly long days and when she comes home, I'm still glued to computer.

I've failed miserably over the last year. So now I'm confronted with the high risk of stocks and the very real risk of losing my love. I'm calling it the only way I can: "The Relationship Storm Watch."

I ask myself I'm I too self-absorbed in my own plight, and I think I know the answer: unfortunately, yes.

Afghanistan President Karzai criticizes US, exposing tension

KABUL. The top U.S. general in Afghanistan expressed dismay yesterday at remarks by President Hamid Karzai, who suggested that Washington benefited from Taliban attacks on his country.

Karzai's remarks, delivered during the first visit by new U.S. Defense Secretary Chuck Hagel, further strained already fraught ties between Karzai and the Western allies who are fighting to protect his government from insurgents. REUTERS

Jeb Bush says he is not thinking about presidential bid — yet

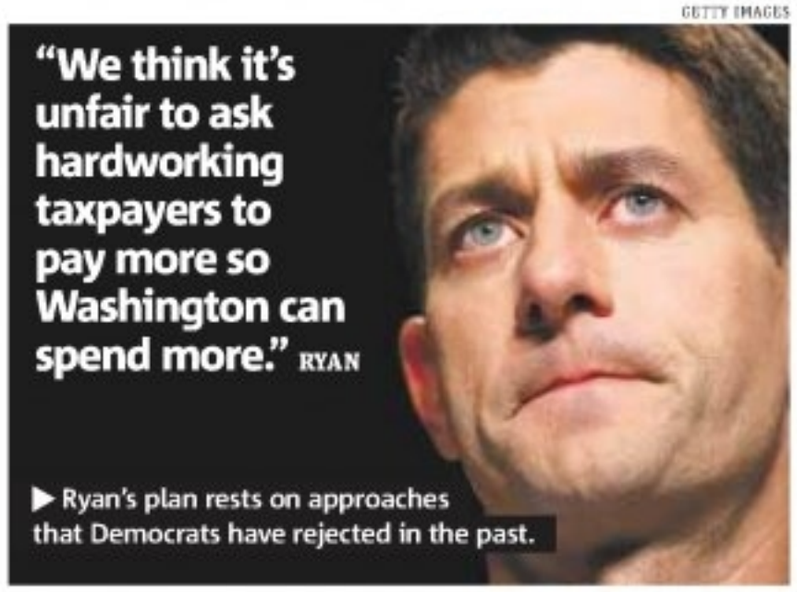
WASHINGTON. Former Florida Gov. Jeb Bush appeared on five morning talk shows yesterday to plug his new book on immigration, but he said his heightened visibility does not mean he is re-entering politics or planning a White House run — not yet, anyway.

The talk-show marathon capped a busy week of public appearances for Bush, one of several Republicans seen as potential contenders for the 2016 presidential nomination. Bush said it is too early to seriously ponder a White House bid.

"I've decided to defer any consideration of it until the proper time ... which is out more than a year from now, for sure," Bush said on CNN's "State of the Union" show. "When I go through that process, I'll let you know." REUTERS

Ryan says budget deal possible as he readies his own proposal

GETTY IMAGES



▶ Ryan's plan rests on approaches that Democrats have rejected in the past.

The Republicans' point person on fiscal issues in Congress said yesterday that compromise with President Barack Obama is possible on taxes and spending even though his soon-to-be-unveiled budget plan faces certain rejection from Obama's Democrats.

Rep. Paul Ryan, the chairman of the House of Representatives Budget Committee, acknowledged that Democrats who control the Senate are likely to defeat his proposal to repeal Obama's signature healthcare law and other elements of his plan to balance the budget within 10 years.

But Ryan, whose ideas on taxes and spending gained national prominence when he was selected as the Republican vice presidential candidate last year, said Democrats and Republicans might be able to agree on less dramatic steps that would narrow budget deficits in coming years.

"There are things that we can do that don't offend either party's philosophy, that doesn't require someone to surrender their principles, that make a good down payment on getting this debt and deficit under control," Ryan said on "Fox News Sunday."

Ryan had lunch with Obama last week as part of an effort by the president to reach out to Republican lawmakers to resolve a fiscal standoff that has slowed economic growth and generated repeated crises over the past two years.

"This is first time I've ever had a conversation with the president lasting more than, say, two minutes, or a televised exchange," Ryan said of their meeting. REUTERS

Similar cuts, different results

Ryan's plan to balance the budget in 10 years is a dramatic change from last year's plan, which also envisioned $5 trillion in cuts but would not have balanced the budget until 2040.

Ryan's budget-balancing efforts are helped by the $620 billion in tax increases on the wealthy that Obama won in a Jan. 1 deal to avert the "fiscal cliff."

But further tax increases are out of the question, he said.

Both Republicans and Democrats want to simplify the tax code to reduce the tax breaks and loopholes that have proliferated since the last comprehensive rewrite in 1986.

Cardinals pray before start of conclave to choose pope

GETTY IMAGES

▶ No conclave in the past century has lasted than more than five days.

115

The 115 cardinal electors under the age of 80 will enter the Sistine Chapel tomorrow and hold one vote that evening. They will vote up to four times a day thereafter until someone receives a two-thirds majority.

Roman Catholic cardinals prayed yesterday for spiritual guidance ahead of a closed-door conclave to choose a new pope to lead the church at one of the most difficult periods in its history.

Cardinals will hold a final pre-conclave meeting today to discuss the state of their church, left reeling by the abdication last month of Pope Benedict and struggling to deal with a string of sexual abuse and corruption scandals.

The 115 cardinals who will take part in the secret ballots, which start on March 12, fanned out around Rome yesterday to hold myriad Masses, either in the quiet of private chapels or in the grandeur of Rome's great cathedrals and basilicas.

Each cardinal is traditionally assigned to a church in the Italian capital, and congregations swelled in parishes visited by those considered the most likely papal contenders — such as Cardinal Odilo Pedro Scherer of Sao Paulo, Brazil.

"We're all preparing for the conclave because we need to make the right decision to decide who is going to be the new pope," Scherer told a small Baroque church in the heart of Rome, crammed with well-wishers.

He was later driven away in a minivan with darkened windows, declining to speak to the waiting hoards of reporters — a taste of the pressures to come if he should become the first non-European to be elected pope in some 1,300 years.

Just up the road, another non-European touted as a possible candidate, U.S. Cardinal Sean O'Malley, also received star treatment as he arrived for Mass in ornate vestments.

"I say sincerely that we hope this is your last visit as cardinal," said parish priest father Rocco Visca, prompting loud applause and cheers from the well-heeled congregation. REUTERS

South Africa's Nelson Mandela discharged from hospital

JOHANNESBURG. Former South Africa President Nelson Mandela has been discharged from hospital after routine tests and is well, the government said yesterday.

"The doctors have completed the tests. He is well, and, as before, his health remains under the management of the medical team," it said in a statement.

The 94-year-old anti-apartheid leader was admitted to the hospital on Saturday for a scheduled medical checkup. He spent the night in the hospital in the capital, Pretoria, and had returned to his Johannesburg home, the statement said.

A spokesman for President Jacob Zuma said doctors treated Mandela for a preexisting condition consistent with his age. REUTERS

New Venezuela election begins

CARACAS. Venezuela has fired the starting gun in a highly charged election race likely to pit Hugo Chavez's preferred successor, acting President Nicolas Maduro, against centrist opposition leader Henrique Capriles.

The pair have until today to register their candidacy for the April 14 vote, which will determine whether Chavez's self-styled nationalist-socialist revolution will live on in the OPEC nation, home to the world's largest proven oil reserves. REUTERS

Iran blocks tool to get around Internet filter

Iranian authorities have blocked the use of most "virtual private networks," a tool that many Iranians use to get around an extensive government Internet filter, Iranian media quoted an official as saying yesterday.

A widespread government Internet filter prevents Iranians from accessing many sites on the official grounds they are offensive or criminal.

Many Iranians evade the filter through use of VPN software, which provides encrypted links directly to private networks based abroad, and can allow a computer to behave as if it is based in another country. REUTERS

Italy and Greece confirm hostages killed in Nigeria

Seven foreign hostages kidnapped last month by a Nigerian Islamist group from a construction company compound have been killed, the Italian and Greek foreign ministries said yesterday.

The al Qaeda-affiliated group Ansaru announced on Saturday that it had killed the hostages seized on Feb. 7 in the northern state of Bauchi because of attempts by Nigerian and British forces to free them.

It published grainy photos purporting to show the bodies of a Briton, an Italian, a Greek and four Lebanese workers snatched from the Lebanese firm Setraco's premises.

Foreign governments had not been able to confirm the killings until yesterday. REUTERS

Thousands in anti-nuclear protest two years after Fukushima

Thousands of protesters marched in the Japanese capital yesterday calling on the government to shun nuclear power, a day before the second anniversary of an earthquake and tsunami that triggered the world's worst atomic disaster in 25 years.

Japan is still coming to terms with the disaster that ravaged its northeastern region two years ago — the earthquake and tsunami killed more than 15,000 people. Several thousand people are still unaccounted for.

"It's becoming more and more important for us to protest. I do this for my children, we can't leave a mess of nuclear power behind," said a mother of two marching in front of the Ministry of Economy, Trade and Industry, chanting "Stop nuclear! Protect our children!"

"People and the media are starting to forget Fukushima and what happened there," said the woman.

The nuclear meltdown at the Fukushima Daiichi plant forced 160,000 people from their homes, many of them will never return. It also sparked an unprecedented protest movement against nuclear power. REUTERS

New York City Council speaker joins the mayoral race to succeed Bloomberg

New York City Council Speaker Christine Quinn, considered a front-runner for New York's next mayor, officially launched her candidacy yesterday for the job that would make her the city's first female and first openly gay mayor.

The Democratic Quinn, 46, made her announcement on Twitter, saying: "It's official. I'm running for mayor to fight for the middle class."

In a video linked to her tweet, Quinn talked about the importance of safe streets, improved schools, affordable child care and housing and the creation of well-paying jobs.

Quinn has the support in the November election of Mayor Michael Bloomberg, according to his aides. Bloomberg's 12-year stint in City Hall comes to a close at the end of the year due to term limits.

Quinn, a former tenant organizer, has been a member of the City Council since 1999 and was elected speaker in 2006.

Launching a "walk and talk" tour of the city's myriad neighborhoods, in the video Quinn urged New Yorkers to "put those sensible shoes on and come on out with us."

In her video, Quinn said she loved New Yorkers for "how colorful they are, how in the best of all possible ways crazy they are."

Quinn is married to Kim Catullo, an attorney.

Big-cat sanctuary reopens to public after deadly lion attack

The California wildlife sanctuary where an African lion attacked and killed a worker last week reopened yesterday, allowing the public to view all the remaining wildcats, including the lion's mate.

Project Survival's Cat Haven resumed regular operations, including guided tours, with the consent of the family of Dianna Hanson, founder Dale Anderson said at a news conference.

Hanson, a 24-year-old intern who had been working at the park since January, was attacked while cleaning an empty cat enclosure.

A 4-year-old male lion named Cous Cous escaped from his feeding pen, apparently by pushing open an improperly secured gate, and pounced on Hanson, fracturing her neck and killing her instantly, Fresno County Coroner David Hadden said.

Sheriff's deputies shot and killed the lion, which weighed at least 400 pounds, after they failed to coax him away from Hanson's body.

JT kills it yet again on 'SNL'

If this whole music thing doesn't work out, we're pretty sure Justin Timberlake would still make bank as a funnyman. The singer/actor hosted "SNL" for the fifth time this weekend, joining the "Five-Timers Club," an elite group of comedy head honchos like Steve Martin, Tom Hanks and Paul Simon, all of whom appeared in Timberlake's opening monologue Saturday. It seemed like Lorne Michaels knew that the way to viewers' hearts would be through bringing back a few "SNL" favorites: The Three Amigos reunited during the monologue, and Andy Samberg and JT teamed up for a "D— in a box" revival (that also featured the Festrunk Brothers).

'Smash' starlet OK with playing it safe

▶ Hilty's got a big personality — on "Smash," that is.

ALL PHOTOS: GETTY IMAGES ENTERTAINMENT

Ivy Lynn, the would-be diva on NBC's "Smash," would never waste a moment in the spotlight. But when we chatted with Megan Hilty, who plays the dynamic character, last Friday after her Carnegie Hall debut singing with the New York Pops, we saw that her public persona is perfectly polished, erring on the side of forgettable. She kicked off the night by claiming that it was "literally a dream come true" — and the cliches didn't end there.

What did it feel like to take that illustrious stage? "It's great to be in front of a live audience again."

Was she nervous about performing as herself, rather than playing a character? "That's the beauty of live theater: I'm never going to be perfect."

Would she be willing to get competitive if she had to face off against "Smash" co-star Katharine McPhee for a role, mirroring the theme on the show? "No, we all love each other."

And how would Ivy handle getting a solo concert at Carnegie? "She probably would have had many more costume changes than I did!"

Wait, did she just confirm our thoughts that her fictional persona would have made a more memorable impression?

The most interesting "confession" came when the actress revealed that she does in fact sit down to watch her own show during a dialogue with Pops conductor Steven Reineke. Thankfully, we did witness a glimmer of that big Ivy personality when the blonde adamantly insisted that the bottle of bubbly sitting nearby at the after-party was reserved for her; we can relate to any woman who puts her stiletto down when it comes to free booze.

But here's our advice for Hilty: Take a page from "Silver Linings Playbook" media darling Jennifer Lawrence; the way to charm the press and public alike these days is less class, more sass. Maybe we should have hung around until after Hilty polished off that champagne.

— Additional reporting by T. Michelle Murphy

Talking points

Bieber's gas mask explained

With Justin Bieber's bummer of a week in London behind him, at least one mystery has been solved: the Canadian pop star's penchant for wearing a gas mask in public. "The gas mask Justin has been wearing around London is a joke between his friends, but people are starting to take it seriously," a source tells Us Weekly. "All his friends take turns wearing it as a joke to throw off the paparazzi. It's not a serious thing; they're just having fun with it."

Miley tries to squash rumors

While her fiance Liam Hemsworth is in his native Australia spending time with family, Miley Cyrus finds herself doing damage control, taking to Twitter to quash rumors that their relationship is in trouble. "I am so sick of L.A. And sick of the lies that come with it," she posted last week. "I didn't call off my wedding." Of course, being spotted out and about in Hollywood without her engagement ring probably doesn't help. But a source assures E! News that all is well in the Hemsworth-Cyrus household. "She is not listening to what everyone is saying about her and Liam," the source says. "Everything is fine between them, as far as I know."

Baby Baldwin will habla espanol

Hilaria Thomas Baldwin is already making plans for her daughter that might not include husband Alec Baldwin. "We're having a girl and we definitely want her to speak Spanish," Baldwin Thomas tells Us Weekly. "It's a little tricky because my husband doesn't speak Spanish, so that'll be a little tricky in the house. But maybe we will have our own conversation and he'll have to learn. We can talk behind his back. I cannot wait."

Has viral marketing gone too far? An ad for a new film raises debate

What would you do if you saw a man strangling another man in an elevator? Would you step in and help? Would you call the police? Would you run like hell?

Some pseudo-sociologists-turned-filmmakers decided to test people's reactions to this shocking scenario in an online video called "Elevator Murder Experiment" (watch it at http://goo.gl/wKB1W).

But it's actually an advertisement for "Dead Man Down," the latest film from the original "The Girl With The Dragon Tattoo" director Niels Arden Oplev (and starring Noomi Rapace and Colin Farrell). The YouTube clip was created by viral video marketing agency Thinkmodo. So far it has more than 2 million views.

▶ The YouTube video has had more than 2 million hits.

"At no point was anyone in danger, even though it looks like it at some points," Michael Krivicka, co-founder of Thinkmodo and director of the video, told Metro World News. He hoped it would spark debate. "Social media is the new platform to reach moviegoers," he says. "A TV spot can only be watched. That's it. A YouTube video, however, can be shared, emailed, commented on, liked, etc. There is great power in that."

"It was a very controlled production," he adds.

All but one of the reactions were completely real, claims the director, including the guy who uses a fire extinguisher. In order to tie the project to "Dead Man Down," the last subject — a man who shows up with his dogs and films the murder with his phone — was actually an actor.

The staged part mimics a key scene in the film where one main character witnesses another lead character strangling someone to death. She records the incident on her phone — and later uses it for blackmail.

There are other subtle clues that tie the viral video to the movie. Krivicka says the last word flashed before the viewer sees the movie title is "revenge," another key theme of "Dead Man Down."

Michelle Castillo
METRO WORLD NEWS

JOHN BAER

▶ Colin Farrell and Noomi Rapace star in "Dead Man Down."

The backlash

Many comments left on the video's page say it could have gone all wrong if a bystander had a gun. Others are calling it a fake, which is OK with Krivicka.

"There is a big difference between advertising and viral marketing," he says. "A viral marketing video is designed to start conversations around the movie."

‘Oz’ follows Yellow Brick Road to No. 1 in theaters

Box office

DISNEY ENTERPRISES, INC.

▶ James Franco and Michelle Williams star in “Oz the Great and Powerful,” which made a ton of money this weekend.

There was no place like “Oz” at the weekend box office.

Walt Disney Co.’s big-budget 3-D movie “Oz the Great and Powerful” amassed $80.3 million in U.S. and Canadian ticket sales, the biggest domestic debut of 2013. The prequel, starring James Franco, added $69.9 million in international markets, Disney said, for a combined $150.2 million opening around the world.

“Oz” dominated all other movies over the weekend, according to studio estimates released on Sunday. Another family film, “Jack the Giant Slayer,” finished a distant No. 2 with $10 million domestically during its second weekend. The comedy “Identity Thief” landed third with $6.3 million.

The opening numbers for “Oz” provided a strong start for the $200 million production, a prequel to the 1939 Hollywood classic “The Wizard of Oz.” The movie stars Franco as a magician whisked by hot air balloon to a magical land where he is mistaken for a wizard. Michelle Williams, Mila Kunis and Rachel Weisz play three witches the wizard encounters.

The big debut for “Oz” outshined the sluggish opening a week earlier for “Jack the Giant Slayer,” which cost $189 million to produce. It pulled in $27.2 million at North American theaters during its first three days. REUTERS

Coming to America

MACALL POLAY

South Korean filmmaker Park Chan-wook has been a staple of foreign genre cinema since 2000's border action film “Joint Security Area.” But he's still best known for his “Vengeance Trilogy,” comprising “Sympathy For Mr. Vengeance,” “Sympathy for Lady Vengeance” and its centerpiece, “Oldboy,” famous for both its hallway hammer fight barnstormer and a scene where its lead slurps up a live octopus. Park makes a perhaps belated debut in America, but he does it his way: “Stoker,” starring Mia Wasikowska, Matthew Goode and Nicole Kidman, is a stylish Gothic thriller about family secrets, outre sexuality and serial killing.

“The sheer volume of opinions is something I wasn’t used to. I found it to be quite arduous.”

PARK CHAN-WOOK ON WORKING IN AMERICA

What made you want to make a film in America?

It took me 10 years to make [my previous film] “Thirst,” from the very inception to finish. After that, I had done all the films I wanted to do. I felt I was in need of a turning point in my career. I was on the lookout for a good script, and this was just a case of good timing.

It seems like the script, though not by you, shares a lot with your previous work.

There are many ways to link this to my previous work — but when I first came across the script, I noticed the characters were different [from my previous films]. They don't seem to have much in the way of ethical dilemmas, whereas the characters in my other films are wrought with dilemma. In “Stoker,” the characters don't seem to have any sense of guilt. But actually it's not that they don't have any dilemmas or sense of guilt — they're just better at hiding them.

What's it like working in the U.S. versus South Korea?

The presence of the studio is stronger here. There's a greater exchange of ideas and opinions. I found myself having to explain why I wanted certain things to be a certain way. The sheer volume of opinions is something I wasn't used to. I found it to be quite arduous. But in the end, it proved very productive.

Little violence

There's very little violence in “Stoker.” Was that a response to your reputation as a maker of violent films — which aren't, it should be noted, even that graphic?

It wasn't a function of me pulling any punches. What sparked my interest in this script was that my daughter was the same age as the protagonist here. I wanted to make a film that girls the same age as India [the lead character] would come to see. Anything that came across as overly disgusting just wouldn't do. I simply wanted to make an elegant and beautiful film [that] girls the same age as India would enjoy.

Drink to the future

‘The Art of Noise’ is 100 years old <fidget> is hosting a Futurist party tonight to celebrate

JEREMY DEPRISCO

▶ Joo Won Park makes music using everyday household items.

In 1913, Italian painter and composer Luigi Russolo, a member of the futurist movement, penned “The Art of Noise,” a manifesto declaring that, with the proliferation of machinery in the early 20th century, music had to adjust to compensate for the increased noise of daily life. “We get infinitely more pleasure imagining combinations of the sounds of trolleys, autos and other vehicles, and loud crowds,” Russolo wrote, “than listening once more, for instance, to the heroic or pastoral symphonies.”

Peter Price, co-director of the experimental music and dance collective <fidget>, says that over the past 100 years the ideas in “The Art of Noise” have gone from seeming radical to being absorbed into every form of music, from the avant-garde to radio hits.

“It was the first time the idea was presented that music could be made from any sound whatsoever, not just the sounds of traditional musical instruments but the sounds of machines or the sounds of nature,” Price says. “In 1913 that was a pretty crazy idea, but now it’s become something that we live with every day.”

Tonight, <fidget> will kick off a yearlong celebration of the 100th anniversary of “The Art of Noise” with the Futurist Cocktail Party, featuring musical performances, a reading of the manifesto by performance artist Mauri Walton and guest speakers discussing Russolo’s legacy.

Performers include Joo Won Park, who will create music from children’s toys, and dancer/mixologist David Konyk, who will be serving up the futurist cocktails.

“The futurists believed that futurism as a concept should evade every aspect of living,” Price says. “Not just the art that you make, but the food that you cook and the cocktails that you drink. So they made recipes, generally focusing on strange and outrageous combinations of taste.”

Make this one simple move to get what you want in life

▶ Stop acting small: Speak up and own your power.

Zen in the City

GABRIELLE BERNSTEIN
WWW.GABBYB.TV

Do you ever get angry and resentful because you're not getting what you want? Or do you feel your needs are not being met? If you do feel like this, then I have another question for you: Do you ask for what you want?

When you feel you're not getting what you want from others, the easiest thing to do is complain about it. But blaming other people for your feelings is the wrong way to approach the issue. The key to getting what you want is to ask for it.

Asking can be really uncomfortable for some folks. I see this often when it comes to asking for a raise, asking for help or merely asking someone to listen to what you have to say. As difficult as it can be to ask, it's important to realize that you won't get what you want until you're willing to put it out there.

If you tend to freak out about asking for what you want, it's time to shake off the fear and change your ways. What you'll come to learn is that, deep down, all people genuinely want to give. Therefore, when you ask for something from a place of authenticity and grace, your request will be met with mutual respect. Now's the time to create a new habit and get your asking muscles in motion!

— Gabrielle Bernstein is the author of "Spirit Junkie."

How to do it

Begin the process of asking for what you want by following these three steps.

1 Accept that it may feel uncomfortable and awkward at first. If you've spent a lot of time unwilling to ask for what you want, testing out new behavior will feel strange. Remember that the strangeness is a good sign. Regardless of how uncomfortable you feel, take this powerful action in the right direction and step outside your comfort zone.

2 Get clear about what you're asking for. When you're clear about what you're asking for, your energy is committed to the request. If you're unclear, your energy wavers, which makes it more difficult to really get behind your ask. It's also really important to back up your request with positive intentions. When your request is backed with the energy of love, it will be received with love.

3 Just ask! The moment you notice yourself avoiding the chance to ask for what you want, move swiftly past your fear and just ask. Though you may be scared, this simple act of asking can change your life in an instant. You'll come to know a new sense of self-respect that will give others the freedom to respect you back.

You love cooking; you love food. For a career in the kitchen, do you need the starched white linens of culinary school, or is it better to hop on the line?

Chefs dish on the age-old chicken vs. egg question

- It's a dilemma for any aspiring chef: Is it better to go to school or work first?
- Chefs from some of NYC's esteemed eateries weigh in
- They gathered for the Careers through Culinary Arts Program, which funds scholarships

Quoted

"I mean, it's not either/or, you need both."
MARCUS SAMUELSSON, RED ROOSTER HARLEM

SCHOOL FIRST

▶ "If you have experience before you go to school, I think it gives you an edge on learning so you can absorb things that you may be familiar with but not quite confident in. Start with school, get the tools you need and remember that the on-the-job training is really how you learn what the industry is all about." MICHAEL LOMONACO, PORTER HOUSE NEW YORK

▶ "It's important to go to school. Actually, if you can combine both, like working during a school break, it's even better. School is supposed to teach you the basics. The chef [will] teach you to connect what you learn. Nowadays I think it's important to study first, then go." MATTEO BERGAMINI, SD26

▶ "I recommend culinary school first. It gets you prepared in the sense of seeing the reality of what you're going into. It also helps you understand a lot of culinary terms that we use." YUHI FUJINAGA, THE SEA GRILL

VS.

RESTAURANT FIRST

▶ "I think it's great to go into a restaurant to make sure it's actually something you want to do. Culinary school's a pretty big investment in time and money." MARC MURPHY, LANDMARC

▶ "Working at a restaurant gives you all the tools to learn before you get [out] there. I worked in a restaurant first, and the moment I got to culinary school I felt like I had the biggest head-start in the world." KELVIN FERNANDEZ, THE STRAND, AMERICAN BISTRO

▶ "Work in a restaurant. It's about whether you like it or not. If you don't love it, you'll never make it. You have to live it, eat it and breathe it. And when you go to school, you learn things, and you learn a lot, but you need to see whether you're suited for it. And you can't tell until you get out there and work in the field." SARABETH LEVINE, SARABETH'S

meredith.engel@metro.us

Q&A: Do you need to go to culinary school?

▶ "You don't need to go, but I do think for some people it is worth it. It depends on the person. I personally didn't go to culinary school." SAM YOO, TORRISI ITALIAN SPECIALTIES

▶ "I went to culinary school and I dropped out. ... I'd say like 80 percent of my cooks are dropouts or they didn't go to school at all. Thomas Keller did not go school." KYUNG UP LIM, MICHAEL'S

▶ "I would say no. It's all about if you can do 80 hours a week and do 12 hours a day and get burned every day — that's when you know you want it. It's not necessarily you go to school, you learn it and you come out and be a chef — and that's what a lot of the schools make it out to be. There's a lot of really hard work before that happens." JOSEPH FORTUNATO, EXTRA VIRGIN

▶ "No, by no means. I've wasted a lot of money just going to school and then [realizing] it's not what it's like on the Food Network." CHRIS WYMAN, SCARPETTA

'It depends on the person'

▶ "Culinary school gives you the knowledge — even how to hold a knife, which is very good. But also, [at a] restaurant, if you have a very good chef, like a teacher, [it's almost like how] the culinary school teaches you." MARIA LOI, LOI

▶ "I think it depends on the person. I did not go to culinary school, but I know some very good cooks that did and I really think it depends on how you learn. I just went to a restaurant and asked if I could work for free, and that's how I learned." SAM HENDERSON, WD-50

▶ "I think culinary school gives you a great basis to learn the things that you really need to know to get started, but there's nothing really like restaurant experience. Working in a restaurant is definitely going to enhance your skill level. But culinary school is a great basis and I would never not recommend going to culinary school if you have the opportunity." SEAN QUINN, CHADWICK'S

They wouldn't call it work if it was supposed to be fun, right?

A list of the Top 100 companies to work for was recently released by Fortune. The best included Google; SAS, providers of analytic software; and CHG Healthcare Services in Salt Lake City. Each organization varies greatly in size and product, yet they are all developing a positive, successful environment. With the help of a few experts, we pull back the curtain to learn what they're doing right.

Fun and freedom appear to be a common thread for the companies on Fortune's list. "If it isn't fun, no one is going to be there for very long. Team outings, ping pong tournaments — whatever fits your culture — create opportunities to laugh and to see each other outside of just your day-to-day professional titles," explains Nick Worswick, vice president and general manager, Corporate at Seamless. CHG Healthcare, number three on the list, keeps things lively with employee talent shows and trivia tournaments. Casual get-togethers and friendly competition often aid in talent recognition and team-building.

These tactics keep employees happy, which is vital in the hospitality business. Coming in at No. 28 on Fortune's list was Kimpton Hotels & Restaurants, owners of Philadelphia's Hotel Palomar and Hotel Monaco. "At Kimpton, fostering a culture of care with a focus on fun has proven to be a recipe for success," explains Mike Depatie, CEO, Kimpton Hotels & Restaurants. "Our employees are our brand, which is why we place an incredible amount of emphasis on making them feel their best at work."

The perks of being at work

It's safe to say we all want work to be fun, but fun isn't the only thing that makes for happy employees.

"While perks like free cappuccino, rock-climbing walls and nap rooms are very nice, they remain perks," says Doug Claffey, CEO of employee survey company, Workplace Dynamics. "What we have found is that while these benefits are nice to have, they don't drive true employee satisfaction." According to a 2012 Workplace Dynamics survey of 1.7 million workers, people most desire the chance to be heard as well as a "visionary and inspirational leader that employees are confident in." It probably doesn't hurt, though, if that leader wants to put in a foosball table.

Looking inward, shining outward

Introverts, own your shyness While extrovert-centric workplaces are the norm, the less-outgoing can shine as well

With her 2008 book — "Introvert Power: Why Your Inner Life is Your Hidden Strength" — Dr. Laurie Helgoe celebrated introverts and their power to develop rich, complex inner lives. But in today's hyper-friendly, team-centric workplace, introverts often find their natural inclinations less than encouraged. A new edition of "Introvert Power" was recently released, with analysis of the latest studies on the psychology of inward-looking personalities. We asked Dr. Helgoe to tell us about the her findings.

PROVIDED

Is the American workplace geared toward extroverts?
Today's work culture tends to be an extrovert-centric. There is an emphasis on processing things as teams. Brainstorming, which is a very extroverted process — thinking aloud about ideas — is a disconnect for someone who likes to form ideas privately.

How can introversion be used to your advantage?
Being honest is a good start. Sometimes introverts feel pressure to act extroverted, pretend they like social events and the high level of social stimulation. But when they finally say they need some quiet to get work done, people respect that. At some point the work has to get done, and introverts have an advantage in tolerating the solitude that is often required for that.

What leadership style best suits an introvert?
There was a groundbreaking study a couple years ago that found that introverts lead more productive teams when they're supervising proactive people. They were able to encourage the good ideas from their employees. Introvert leaders require less attention, so they're more willing to let the attention spread out.

Quoted

Don't throw them a party. A gift certificate for a massage is always lovely.

Ever wanted to learn how to build a staircase, deck or even a house? Do you feel good about completing a project and seeing the end result? Then the career field of Carpentry may be right for you!

Orleans Technical Institute in Northeast Philadelphia is enrolling now for its skills training program in Carpentry, which starts in April 2013. Learning the trade of Carpentry opens up a wide variety of jobs in construction, installation, renovation and repair work. Orleans graduates are prepared for employment as carpenters, carpentry assistants, carpentry apprentices, maintenance carpenters, finish carpenters, house repairers, door installers, cabinet and trim installers, lay-out workers, framers, assemblers, and woodworkers.

Training at Orleans is hands-on. Orleans' instructors have industry experience and teach the technical skills that employers are looking for. In just 6 months, Carpentry students build a house to scale in order to experience framing, drywall, rough and fine finishing, siding, shingled roofing, and door and window installation. Students learn blueprint reading and also construct a full-size deck and staircase. The curriculum includes in-demand "green skills," including dismantling houses and recycling wood, working with engineered lumber and manufactured wood, insulation, weatherstripping and more.

"The classroom experience at Orleans is as close as you can get to a real-life application," said Lee Friedman, a Carpentry instructor since 2009 and former Orleans grad. "We give students a well-rounded introduction to many aspects of Carpentry. Students leave here with confidence and know enough to accomplish big projects."

With a history of success for nearly 40 years and newer training facility using the latest equipment and tools, Orleans Tech prepares students for a new future in the growing building trades field. Upon completion of their training, students receive job search assistance, working one-on-one with Orleans Tech employment specialists to identify available job positions as well as unadvertised openings with local companies that like to hire from Orleans. In addition, students are eligible to receive industry-recognized certification upon successful completion of certification exams, such as OSHA 10.

Tips for pitching successful ideas to your boss

At any job it can be tempting to keep your head down and stick within your daily to-do list. But pitching the right idea at the right time could have benefits for both your employer and your job standing.

Here are five tips to ensure you don't strike out when pitching your ideas:

Be confident: Before you can convince other people that your idea is great, you first have to convince yourself. Be confident in your idea and its effectiveness. Doubts are contagious; if you have them, then chances are that your boss will get them, too.

Do your research: There is nothing worse than proposing an idea and having someone tell you that it's already been done. Getting the idea is just the first step.

From there, you need to research to figure out if and how it can become a reality. Make yourself the expert on this concept so that when your boss asks questions, you have answers at the ready.

While you may think Tank-top Tuesdays are a fabulous idea for the office, it's always helpful to get a second opinion. Talk to a few people in the office for feedback and advice, but make sure you choose people whose opinions you trust and who won't commandeer your idea.

CREATAS

Figure out who pitch to: If you have an idea for your website, there is no point in taking it to the sales department. Tailor your pitch for the specific person you're speaking with. Ask around the office to figure out who will be the most receptive to your concept and if he or she has any pitch preferences (a quick e-mail pitch instead of a detailed proposal, for example).

Put it in writing: Writing it out will allow you to put careful thought into how your idea is presented. Rather than word-vomiting up your pitch, you can clearly demonstrate what the problem is and how your idea is the best solution. Use confident language and keep your pitch brief but thorough.

Your boss is a busy person and likely won't have time to read a long e-mail, so grab his or her attention in a few lines by demonstrating why this is a worthwhile concept. Make that person want to learn more.

Finally, offer to send more information or discuss this topic with him or her at the earliest convenience.

Time it right: Right before a big deadline or client meeting is probably not the best time to shoot your boss an e-mail about new, exciting things. Time your pitch so your boss can focus to read it through.

If you're unsure of your boss's work habits, later in the week is usually a good option (i.e., Thursday or Friday) because his or her workload will likely be winding down in advance of the weekend.

College? Nah. You can hack it — and see the world, too

In 2011, Hendrix College student Dale J. Stephens started receiving a lot of unexpected press. His website, UnCollege.org, delivered a hypercritical cost-benefit analysis of college at a time when many parents and students were questioning their faith in higher education for the first time.

In one of the many interviews Stephens gave that year, he casually mentioned that he was working on a book. He now admits that he probably should have said "thinking about," rather than "working on" his book, but the quote was published anyway and Stephens was soon approached by curious book agents.

Stephens got around to writing the book, and the result was released last week: "Hacking Your Education: Ditch the Lectures, Save Tens of Thousands, and Learn More Than Your Peers Ever Will."

To be sure, Stephens approaches the issue from a unique perspective. With his family's begrudging support, he left his California public school at 12 and developed his own curriculum right up until he took the ACT and applied to colleges.

"I spent a lot of my time in college wondering, 'If I was able to get into college without going to high school, why is there any reason that I need to go to college to get into life?'" he says. "And why am I paying $40,000 a year for this, when I can figure out how to learn for free?"

This month, the 21-year-old Stephens is crisscrossing the country on a media blitz — From the "Today" show, to Katie Couric, to

Education books

An icon enters the philosophy department

Ayn Rand never developed a foothold in the philosophy curriculum at most U.S. colleges. For more than 20 years, a small group of professors nationwide has been pushing to change that. And now the professors have a series of textbooks intended for the college classroom: The University of Pittsburgh Press will publish a course of books called "The Ayn Rand Society Philosophical Studies."

"Rand is opposed to many entrenched ideas in the academy. She was an advocate of laissez-faire capitalism as a political philosophy. And it's well-known that most people in the academy tend to be politically left wing, or at least liberal-leaning," says James J. Lennox, co-editor of the new text. Based on lectures and papers by Ayn Rand Society members, the second volume, set to publish in June, will delve into her theory of epistemology.

But AR Society members are aware that books alone won't get Rand into the classroom; they need professors willing to teach the material.

"The biggest problem is getting more people who are trained to teach objectivism into tenured positions in philosophy departments," says Lennox. METRO/BW

About the author

Ayn Rand (1905 – 1982) was a novelist and essayist who created a philosophical moment called objectivism. To date, her books have sold more than 20 million copies worldwide. She rejected self-sacrifice as a virtue and instead promoted her own concept of "rational egoism." She has influenced a large segment of contemporary conservatives thought in the United States.

Regan era was start of big debt

RE: "AUTOMATIC ACROSS-THE-BOARD BUDGET CUTS" (METRO MARCH 7) You dumb cluck, it was Ronnie Raygun who started the humongous debt. Under Carter it was "peanuts" (no pun intended). Raygun and Bush left a huge debt like never before for Clinton. Democrat Clinton cleaned up the debt. Raygun gave the store away in his eight years, spending on everything and giving the rich their huge tax breaks. Cutting taxes for the rich is the same as spending on a program, because it is money going out of the U.S. Treasury. In comes Republican GWB (Guy Without Brains) and back goes the debt and soon the democrat surplus is gone. GWB accomplished this vanishing act by "spending" $10 billion a month for two wars and "spending millions of dollars of our money to give the wealthy huge tax cuts." So "spending" is not just when the Democrats fund a social program or healthcare or the environment, it's when these idiot Republicans blow our money spending on the rich and the military and corporations. That dummy Rumney talked about buying ships like they were candy bars! One can only imagine what conditions would be like today had Bush or McLame been in office the past four years. LARRY BLONG, VIA E-MAIL

Filibuster was a waste of time

RE: TOM FOREMAN COLUMN "DRONING ON" (METRO MARCH 8) Mr. Foreman's editorial on March 8 on Senator Rand Paul's filibuster was nothing short of garbage. He was not fighting a lost cause. In fact, he was wasting valuable time that should have been spent addressing the budget and impeding the safety of the nation by further delaying the confirmation of the head of the CIA, Chuck Hagel. A lost cause is tax reform. Addressing climate change and Wall Street reform are actual lost causes. What Senator Rand Paul and the other clowns that rode together in their clown car to the house floor to pontificate the magnitude of how out-of-touch, inept and viable candidates for a drone strike they are for terrorizing the nation with such in eloquent speech and mindless dribble. What was made painfully clear in this op-ed was Tom Foreman's inability to identify what truly merits writing about to inform the public and to inspire readers rather than solicit their scorn. KING E. JOHNSON, VIA E-MAIL

Temple leaves Atlantic 10 with style, upsets VCU

- Owls rally late for huge victory on Senior Day
- Wyatt scores 30 points
- On to A-10 tourney

As a coach, you want nothing more than for your seniors to play at their best in their last home game. Fran Dunphy can proudly say his five seniors gave it their all in the Owls' 84-76 win yesterday over No. 21 VCU.

Temple's five seniors — Khalif Wyatt, Scootie Randall, Rhalir Hollis-Jefferson, T.J. DiLeo, Jake O'Brien — combined for 71 of the team's 84 points. Wyatt, the leading candidate for A-10 player of the year, notched 30 points while shooting 13-of-16 from the free-throw line.

O'Brien and Randall brought the whiteout-themed crowd to its feet, combining for eight 3-pointers. O'Brien had 19 points, with Randall adding 13.

"Jake O'Buckets [O'Brien] did his thing," said Dunphy. "His points for shot are incredible, but he's done that all year. He can really score the ball."

The victory marked Temple's last regular-season win as a member of the A-10 conference. The Owls finish with an all-time record of 376-172.

VCU (24-7) was led by Juvonte Reddic's 20 points and nine rebounds. Treveon Graham added 17 points, while also pulling down seven boards.

VCU is known for its "Havoc" defense, which speeds up its opponents into making turnovers. Coach Shaka Smart felt like the Owls just had a stronger desire to win at the end of the day.

"Temple coming into this game wanted it really, really bad," said Smart. "They had a lot on the line with Senior Day, NCAA tournament talk, a bye in the A-10 tournament and they played with that level of urgency, and we did not match that level of urgency."

Temple won't be satisfied until they are guaranteed a spot in the NCAA tournament.

"It's not up to us, but I would like to think so," said Wyatt. "We still have a lot of basketball to play. We're going to Brooklyn on Friday and try to keep winning games, and let the committee do their job."

VCU's Smart reflects on Owls' Chaney

John Chaney and the 1987-88 Owls were honored at halftime for the 25th anniversary since being ranked No. 1 in the country. VCU coach Shaka Smart had plenty to say about Chaney.

"Coach Chaney's one of my favorite coaches of all time," he said. "When I was a young assistant coach, just getting in the business, I got the chance to spend a little time around him. He did a great job building men.

"Sometimes, so much is made of winning and losing — and he won a ton of games, but the most important thing is that we [the coaches] are moving these players forward as people and nobody did it better than coach Chaney."

Phillies beat Astros, 7-1

Lefty Cole Hamels rebounded from a shaky outing last week and tossed five strong innings yesterday in a 7-1 win over the Astros.

Hamels allowed just one run, one hit and one walk. He threw 34 of his 57 pitches for strikes.

Erik Kratz delivered a two-run double, while Laynce Nix smashed a solo home run. Freddy Galvis also knocked in two runs with a double.

The Phils are off today. They'll take on the Detroit Tigers tomorrow (1:05 p.m.).

CARFAX VEHICLE HISTORY REPORTS

Sandberg helping mold young Phillies hitters

When Domonic Brown talks about how he has possibly turned the corner from minor-league prospect to potential starting outfielder, he mentions one name.

"Ryne Sandberg helped make such a difference," Brown said. "He really gave me a boost when I was with Lehigh Valley last year."

While coaching the Iron Pigs the last two seasons, Sandberg has been toasted by players and pundits.

"You have to respect the job Ryne Sandberg has done," ESPN analyst John Kruk said.

The Hall of Fame second baseman enjoyed a brilliant career between the lines. He paid his dues in the minors for the last six seasons before finally getting the call to the majors as Charlie Manuel's right-hand man.

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Sandberg could be in line to take over for Charlie Manuel, who is in the final year of his contract.

Sandberg will coach third base for the Phils and assist Manuel, who is going without a bench coach.

"I love working with Charlie," Sandberg said. "He's one of the best baseball men you'll ever meet."

Sandberg appears to be in line to succeed the most successful manager in Phillies history. Manuel, who has the most wins in club history with 727, is in the last year of his deal. It's uncertain what 2014 holds, but it appears that Sandberg may be in line for the gig next year.

"That's not something I'm thinking about," Sandberg said. "This is Charlie's team. I'm just grateful to be where I am right now."

Sandberg has the credentials. He went 155-132 with the Iron Pigs. He won Baseball America Manager of the Year honors in 2011.

"Ryne is a terrific manager," Brown said. "He deserves all the credit for helping develop everyone at Lehigh Valley."

Sandberg has fond memories managing the Iron Pigs and living in the Lehigh Valley.

"I had some great kids on the team those years," Sandberg said. "I had a terrific time with them, but I also loved the fans in the Lehigh Valley. They came out and supported the team."

▶ Hopkins beat Tavoris Cloud, a boxer 18 years younger than he is, to claim the IBF title Saturday night.

Hopkins makes history again, wins IBF title

Bernard Hopkins has never been bashful. At age 48, why start now?

Hopkins scored a 12-round unanimous decision Saturday night over Tavoris Cloud to earn the IBF light heavyweight title. He is the oldest boxer to claim a major championship, breaking the record he set last May when he beat Jean Pascal.

"I don't believe anybody in the 175 weight class and possibly the 168 class can beat me," Hopkins said after beating the 30-year-old Cloud. "It was great to break [in] the Barclays Center with a [legendary] performance."

Hopkins connected on 169 of 417 punches and improved his overall record to 53-6-2. The fight marked the 19th title bout of Hopkins' illustrious career in the ring. METRO
